Put in www.google.com.tpbQ: Tesseract: Prevent it from reading contact details from the image I'm using Tesseract API with java to generate text from an image. What I'm trying to do is to not allow the program to read or match any contact details like name, phone no, address, etc. from the image. I'm doing this because I'm working on a database that houses everything, and I'm not sure if this is possible. A: I'm assuming that by contact details, you mean something like a Facebook profile. If so, then you should not be using Tesseract, but something like Face++ or even Google Contacts. Tesseract works by analyzing the pixels in your image and then creating an array of, well, text. The reason it is so good at recognizing text is because it learns a model of the text that is in the image. So if the same text is in the image again, it will be able to analyze the array of text and figure out what it should be. But, if you want to remove any kind of text, it is rather difficult. For example, if you just cut out the text, Tesseract will just assume it is all spaces, and all spaces are not what you want. To further your goal, it may be better to train Tesseract on a set of photos that do not include certain kind of text. Then when you want to use it, you can do: Tesseract tess = new Tesseract(); tess.setPageSegMode(TessBaseAPI.PageSegMode.PSM_AUTO_OSD); tess.setImage(imageFile); String osdOutput = tess.getOSD(); If you don't want to use Tesseract, another possibility is to use the goku/tesseract wrapper

A: From f4ff5dd7fe7b4fec8021c6a8354debdbb2b5f220. I see that you're using Ubuntu. Windows 7 x64 is said to be impossible to upgrade to (The advice is to buy a new PC with a 32-bit version of Windows. There is apparently a hack to unlock Windows 7 64-bit. For now it might be best to reinstall Windows 7 if you're not familiar with Linux. Using Windows is so integrated into everything that switching might be very hard.
